

Land Link – Connecting Farmers and Ranchers with Landowners

Saturday, Jan. 26th 3pm

About the Session:

Beginning farmers and ranchers often struggle to secure land tenure in an environment of rising land prices. Topics for this session will cover the continuum of work experience and education, the challenges of accessing land, capital and water, the common pitfalls that beginning farmers and ranchers face when launching an agricultural business, and tips for building successful land link relationships.

About the Speaker:

Dan Waldvogle is the current Director of Colorado Land Link, a keystone program of Guidestone Colorado. As a first-generation farmer/rancher himself, Dan is acutely aware of the challenges that beginning farmers and ranchers face in accessing a viable career in agriculture. He has a diverse professional background in production agriculture where he has worked with livestock, hay and vegetables. He is passionate about regenerative agricultural practices, agricultural policy, food justice and keeping our working lands in production. Dan is thrilled to be working on behalf of farmers and ranchers where he works to highlight the pathways for access to land, capital, water, education, and work experience.
